Two rognish eyes look up and say,

Pale and weaty, strangely old,

Clothed in rags abound it rolled,

Walked around, lest, coming ulgli,

Rich men passed, and thought within;

"'Twere well that life had never been,"

They might hear the hungry cry

As though misfortune were a sin

Only the pauper mother sailed,

But by and by that baby died,

Only the mother blessed the child,

And murmired love in accents mild

And they buried it (on the pauper's sido

Elections in Kentucky.

It is probably not generally known that nembers of the Forty-First Congress from Kentucky are to be elected in November next. Yet such is the fact. Under the recent law, the Congressmen from all the States are to be chosen on the day when the Presidential election is held. The present members hold their seats until the 4th of March next. Heretofore the Congressional elections in Kentucky have been held in August, and when called sessions
